

BRAND GUIDELINES

These guidelines have been put together to help you use the branding system correctly and in a way that supports the unity and visual consistency that we are trying to achieve at SEND International.

Ideally, most of the large-scale visual communications for this organization should be done by the Communications departments in the sending offices or hubs but we also want to allow others to use the brand for their own personal support designs, events, and other applications that might not be worked on by the creative department.

WHY WE NEED A BRAND

Our brand isn't just a logo, and it isn't our mission statement either. It is the set of thoughts and emotions that come to mind when someone thinks about our organization - their perception of who we are through what they see and hear about us.

Our ultimate goal will always be to draw more people, young and old, into the mission, to be trained, equipped and ready to go into the nations and spheres of society to preach and teach the gospel and bring many into the Kingdom of God.

IDENTITY ELEMENTS

OUR MASTER LOGO

Our master logo consists of a logotype and a logomark. The logomark contains the official corporate SEND International mark in keeping with honoring SEND's official brand.

*Please do not try to recreate these logos yourself, but use the official logo files that are at SEND.ORG/BRANDING

OUR BRAND COLORS

The primary color (navy) should be used most often and for all written text, and main logos. The white version of our logo can also be used where the navy one cannot be seen. Orange is another color variation that is very strong when it comes to brand identity.

For secondary colors use these where it is appropriate. Please use the provided color codes below before simply guessing!
